

How do the arts influence and reflect their environment? What role does culture play in revolutionary change? What are the peculiarities of the arts and culture in authoritarian systems? This course explores the ways in which both “high” and popular culture shaped and reflected the essential dynamics of Soviet society. Our inquiry will be guided by the artifacts of cultural expression, from popular music, film, and other forms of entertainment, along with literature, poetry and the visual arts. This course is an invitation to explore the rich and distinctive cultural traditions of twentieth-century Russia and the often tragic circumstances under which they evolved.

Course Context and Expectations

What Makes this Course?

You do! While this syllabus provides a road map for regular class sessions, a large part of our work together will be a collaborative discussion, exploration, and analysis of significant artifacts of Soviet culture. Much of this work will take place in a networked learning environment, which will use blogging, Twitter, and other learning technologies to construct, elaborate and refine the contours and content of the course. This is a course that you make rather than a course you take. I am interested in deepening and expanding our in-class discussions, as well as our creative and research endeavors. I hope that this hybrid course format will help us create the course together in an immediately accessible, professional, enduring and transparent medium.

This is a networked course that leverages active co-learning and the web to enhance our understanding of the key characteristics and dynamics of Soviet culture. We are a community of co-learners, and will depend on each other's unique aptitudes and experiences to make the most of our time together. We are fortunate to have Ms. * as the senior editorial assistant for the course.

* will help me curate the content from your posts into an inviting and rich multi-media experience on the main course website. She will also serve as a peer mentor and embedded cultural expert in our F2F meetings.

We will devote several F2F meetings to working with, experiencing, and even performing various forms of cultural creativity. There will be opportunities to watch classic and popular films, read Futurist manifestoes out loud, perform agitational skits, listen to music, etc. Our collaborative work in these sessions will help shape the work you do on your blogs. In other words, you will need to come to class in order to participate fully in the learning community.

The blogging / digital artifact assignments are intended to leverage the freely accessible resources of the World Wide Web as well as the digitized collections of the Virginia Tech libraries in order to:

- Develop your skills in historical, critical, and textual analysis
- Develop your skills identifying, using and citing cultural artifacts (texts, film, music, etc.)
- Develop your understanding of the key developments and dynamics of Soviet Culture
